

English 202H: Adult Literacy

- Learn about literacy through exciting texts and invigorating class discussions
- Participate in community-based literacy service projects
- Tutor adults who are striving to improve their own literacy skills
- Satisfy your English 202 requirement while earning community-focused internship credits
- All students, regardless of major, are welcome
- Prerequisites: English 015, English 030, or English/CAS 137/8H and the successful completion of 27.1 credits

According to former English 202H tutors:

- I had a really great time in English 202H. . . . I am teaching with Teach for America after graduation, and I felt that tutoring this semester was great preparation for thatFor the learners who need your help, your decision to enroll in this class and to provide a much needed community service could be life-altering. Take the leap and reap the rewards!
- It was one of the best feelings in the world when I found out that all the hard work I had put in with Beth resulted in her passing the math portion of the GED exam. I can also guarantee that you will not be the only one to benefit from this experience. Learning partners genuinely appreciate all the help we tutors are providing them.
- With patience, a positive outlook, and an open mind, you will have the experience of a lifetime, and this class will make your semester one of the best here at Penn State!

For more information, visit the course website at <http://www.personal.psu.edu/law17/index.html> or contact Lorena Waselinko <law17@psu.edu>.